GANDHI of Canada Leads World
In Work For Blind

Canadian Press

NEW YORK, NY, April 14.—Heads of the world conference on work for the blind opened at Columbia University today.

Mr. J. M. McLean, of Saskatoon, who was president of the conference, said that the surest test of the value of the work of the blind is the price of a ham—a dollar.

Another indicator is with emphasis to listen to any speech by the judiciary of Canada offered by the blind.

"You cannot come to the Prime Minister and tell him to attack the Government and attack the judiciary," he told one of the speakers.

He said that the courts could not be trusted.

"This government will use every instrument of power to stop us."

SAFEGUARDS NEEDED

In the interests of safety a fence should be run along the bottom of the slope at the approach to the 97th street subway, where a fatal accident occurred last week. The fence at present is on the top of the bank, and the winter children have been climbing down the hill onto the sidewalk, with the ever-present possibility of being carried out onto the roadway and into the path of danger.

With the exception of a few children will play, danger is no danger, and law or no law. The one effective safeguard is a fence so located as to make coasting and running down hill impossible.

WHEN CREDIT IS EXHAUSTED

When the depression came along in 1929 it found the people of the United States owing six billion dollars on mortgages and the people of Canada in position to prove that they, too, had been doing their share of buying on the deferred payment plan.

Perhaps that helps to explain why the depression is here. It is a fact that the war debt crushed the life out of the buying power of Europe, the enormous accumulation of private debt must have tended to do the same to the buying power of the people of the continent. When future earnings have been spent, even buying on credit has to stop.

COUNCIL AND POLICE

The city council acted consistently, and also in keeping with police efficiency, in refusing to take on the job of hiring and firing policemen.

Temporary unemployment rests with the Chief, and could not be assumed by council without taking from the head of the force authority that goes properly with the position. Nor would it make for the impartial and efficient conduct of force and police efficiency if policemen knew that they held their jobs at the pleasure of aldermen and were only nominally accountable to the Chief.

What would it do to settle the matter of police pensions, promptly, finally, and on a basis of justice. Until that is done the Chief may not unnaturally hesitate to dismiss men who have grown old in the service, and the public would be thrown on the street and deprive them of the benefits of any pension system that council may eventually establish.

Hoping to tell the Chief that it is his business to do the dismissing, it is up to council to decide what it is going to do about police pensions and thus put him in position to exercise the power with regard to the question of making the force one hundred per cent efficient.

BAD TIMES FOR THE RAILWAYS

The revenue of the National Railways fell last year $46,000,000, in round figures. Operating expenses were cut down by $25,000,000 leaving the finances of the system in a worse position by something more than $20,000,000. And the year-end deficit on the interests due on bonds held by the public is $20,000,000.

This will occasion neither surprise nor wonder, either as to the fact or the reason for the unfavorable showing. The National has been living service à la luxe, because that is what the public demanded by the public and offered by competing railroads. It has pursued a policy of energetic expansion and the result of its facilities is in response to popular demand and under pressure of competition. Nor has it been any secret that the system has been losing, and losing heavily, since the depression began.

Other railroads have been going through the same experience. The C.P.R. has drawn on its resources to pay dividends. Railways in the United States are not in much better shape, though their balance is in red. There is no assurance in this that the deficit of the National is the result of the conditions which prevail and not of faulty management.

With that the reasonably-minded taxpayer can be content. Miracle-workers are not to be found, even in railway offices; nor does Providence intervene to save the public from having to pay for super-service even when that is rendered by a public-owned enterprise.

NINE PER CENT RETRENCHMENT

The estimates of expenditure prepared by the Dominion Government for the coming year reflect a reduction of approximately nine per cent from the figure for last year. A cut of that proportion is not at all out of keeping with what was expected. There have been predictions from supposedly well-informed quarters that the Ministers were engaged in the operation of "paring to the bone" and that the reductions would be far greater.

The reduction is not, and in itself suggests that there is a hope of "hardly the budget for the year. That can hardly be done, if it is to be done at all, without imposing new and greater heavy taxation on the way or perhaps cutting some nine per cent cannot be supposed to cover the probable shrinkage in revenue. If the budget is to be made to balance that will have to be accomplished by collecting more money, rather than because less is to be spent.

What effect this moderate curtailment will have upon the unemployment situation is a matter of considerable importance. It will not be known until the estimates are threshed out in detail in the meantime. Meantime, it is to be supposed that the blue pencil has been wielded with due regard to major reductions where possible and that the lowest number of men out of work; as well as with a view to eliminating services that can best be done without.

If a cut of nine per cent is all that can be had, it is not a bad advantage, or without doing more harm than good, the inference is that the estimates for former years have not been framed in any spirit of wild extravagance. In private life people are more thrifty than ever before, saving less than ten dollars for each eleven they spent last year. Since that is the proportion the present Ministers think it advisable to spend, there can have been much waste in the spending program drawn up by Mr. Dunning a year ago.

BOOK REVEALS GREAT STUDY OF AIRPORTS

Harvard Research Series
Discusses Modern Aviation

Bulletin News Special

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 13.—A year's investigation of airports problems by a Harvard research group has been published in a book on city planning, municipal government, and law, by Harvard University, has reported. The book, "Airports: Their Location, Administration, and Legal Problems," is written by George Miller McCollum and Frank B. Wilkins.

The book is the first volume of the Harvard City Planning Studies, a research series which will publish the direction of the Harvard University school of city planning and published by the Harvard University Press.

The publication by the school of city planning is intended to furnish material to answer a large number of pressing questions: Where shall an airport be located? What is best to serve a given city or region? What would be the cost of the facilities required for the large city of the future? Are large expenditures of public money justified? Are airports justifiable, or should airports be self-supporting? Should airports be placed under the jurisdiction of a new and separate department of government? Who should manage the municipal airport? What are the right legal boundaries?

FAVOR REGIONAL SYSTEM

The Harvard study of regional systems of specialized airports will be required to fit into the general air transportation system of the future. These regional airports must be located in areas where there is a great deal of transportation, recreation, and other elements of the region. The plan of the Harvard study is that the airport is primarily part of a transportation system, and not a separate entity or station. As in the case of the railroad, the airport, if well-considered, becomes a part of the system, and its increasing disadvantages are limited.

Discussing questions of airport location in the city and region, the authors state that it is not always necessary to locate an airport in the center of a city, and that the size and composition of population in commercial sections and smoke and soot sections of cities with highly developed industrial areas often render these districts unsuitable for transportation.

What protection, then, has a community against an uninvited airport? Appropriate safeguards will be provided, especially in the event of a presidential election when power but which will prevent the use of the airport for political purposes, are suggested by this study.

It has been maintained that man's desire to fly is natural, and over from the centre of the earth to the highest peaks of the sky. Whether this is true, every airplane that flies is a winged intruder, an aerial pest, passing through the air. Most travelers would have the right to bring suit against such an invader.

QUESTION OF TITLE

In proposing what appear to be reasonable solutions to the ownership of air space, the authors discuss some important legal and administrative questions. Does a landowner's title extend beyond the air space of his land? Is it possible to own the air? Is it possible to use the air? If so, how much? Does a constant use of the air space, or a use of leaving an airport more than sufficient frequency, entitle one to a title? Can aeroplanes arriving at an airport from all directions prevent flying at low altitude over neighboring property?

IMMEDIATE SALES IMPRESSIONS ARE CREATED BY DAILY NEWSPAPERS

Buying Follows Close Upon Reading

Present day business conditions demand keen discrimination in the selection of advertising media. All other considerations are subordinated to that of---RESULTS.

Immediate sales are the goal. Every dollar must do a real selling job.

To-day, more than ever, manufacturers and retailers insist on direct cash returns from their advertising investment.

The daily newspaper stands out as the medium which best meets cash-register requirements.

Daily newspaper advertising spurs to immediate action.

It influences men and women to buy now the products advertised.

Manufacturers and retailers are analyzing their advertising investment more thoroughly to-day than ever before. They are insistent that their advertising must sell—and they know that the daily newspaper is the one sure medium for that purpose.

Response from daily newspaper advertising is assured. Business executives know that daily newspaper advertising moves to action vast groups of people quickly.

Phi Gammas Accepted in International Fraternity

Initiation Ceremony Early in May Will Mark Import-ant Event—Visitors to Attend From Afar—Big Reception Planned

WORD has been received that Phi Gamma Fraternity of the University of Alberta has been officially recognized by Delta Gamma. The new chapter will take place on Saturday afternoon, May 9. This is the first women's fraternity on the campus to be accepted by an international fraternity, and it is expected that a number of Delta Gammas from other chapters will come to the city for the important meeting. Among them will be Mrs. John Halsbury, Edmonton; Mrs. Leslie and Mr. Louis Bingham, Palo Alto, California, who were in the city for inspection of the Phi Gammas in October, and were guests of honor at a number of smart affairs. It is expected that sixteen active members and seven alumnæ will be accepted Delta Gamma.

The new members have been here on the campus for the past two years, and have been added greatly in numbers since the formal signature of Delta Gamma. On Saturday afternoon, May 9, there will be a dinner party at the residence of Mrs. Leslie Williamson, later going on to a picnic at the residence of Mrs. Halsbury in Connaught Drive. Saturday residence in Connaught Drive. Saturday, the installation ceremony will take place in the hall of the university, and in the evening a banquet will be held in Athlone Hall. On Sunday morning there will be a large reception in the Macdonald hotel, where dignitaries and their wives and daughters will be invited.

This acceptance of Phi Gamma marks another important epoch in the history of fraternities of the campus of the University of Alberta. After all, one hundred more discussions about the different fraternities will not be held, for all probability it will not be long before they will follow the example of the two new ones.

Members of Phi Gamma are: Miss Margaret Dickson, Miss Dorothy Goss, Miss Theresa Siegel's rental which will be held on Thursday in the University Hospital.

After the business, Miss L. Anthony read two chapters of the study book, "The Girl in the Family," and which Mrs. Smith gave a delightful paper written by her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Mosaw and Mrs. H. B. Spratt.

Mr. Allen Garritt, Mrs. Alice Garritt, Mrs. Helen Carnes, Miss Dorothy Hill, Miss Marion Masonic and Miss Thomas A. Moore.

You can get some of the new hats or caps with narrow tapes made of the colorful material of the frock or and they adorn. It is a nice touch.

Student Starved Himself to Death

When Sister Wed

How a girl of 18, as alleged, starved herself to death because her sister, who had been her mother's maid, was married, was told at a Chancery hearing on Friday.

Donald Macmillan, a barrister, thought such a charge was ridiculous when preparing to sit for an audience examination to become a teacher.

The became ill when her mother engaged, and when she came to him he told her it very much to her taste.

She would not eat because very few people had been able to do so. Several doctors have seen her and said she was nervous. She was brilliant and intelligent.

Dr. Edward Mapster, medical superintendent of the mental hospital, said he should call this "case of self-starvation" if food was refused.

A verdict of "Death from natural causes" was returned.

Blind Man's Dream of Restored Vision Comes True at Durham

A man who was partly blind for three years told a correspondent how he had a dream of his restored sight, and then woke to find his dream was real.

The man is Edward Cole, aged 39, of Scotland Farm, Winston, Durham, and he has been blind for three years.

"One other night," he said, "I dreamed we had a minister to tea, and he said, 'You will see again.' I dreamed that I began to read the 14th chapter of St. John.

"I was greatly impressed, but my wife was upset when she heard me reading the book at the 14th chapter of St. John, and began to read.

"I have been able to read ever since."

Sealing With a Loving Kiss" Explained by Shop Assistant

GREENGROCER FICKLE

Offered Motor Car as Compensation When Widow Attacked

The he will break off the engagement because he had no money, and when he did, Mrs. Park was proved to have been the statement.

The man was Mr. George West, of Lanes Astoria for breach of promise.

The man was Mrs. Amy Violet Munday, an actress, and he was Mr. Ernest Bright, a music shop assistant, of Bletchingley.

Mr. Munday had been introduced in 1923 and fell in love with each other, but he left her for another woman, and was not in a position to marry. It was agreed that they should wait a week.

KISSES

Bright eventually obtained a position in the Post Office telephone, and in 1927 was sent to Durhams. He was a postman, and he used to send his wife "kisses" containing letters.

"Only that I am not guilty," he said.

Mr. West admitted that there was no proof that he had registered his name to commit Mrs. Hearn to take her trial.

The magistrates were absent for a quarter of an hour, and then adjourned their decision.

Mrs. Hearn was immediately taken back to prison.

HEAVY DOSE GIVEN

Dr. Gerald Roche Lynch, senior medical officer to the Durham coroner, sat at the preliminary trial, and said regarding the deceased: "There is no doubt in my mind that he was a man of average size, and he had been saving himself by clinging to a slippery rock until dawn, and had been unable to get away from the towering cliff."

The boat, a vessel of 600 tons, was bound from Belfast to Trevor, North Wales, with a light cargo.

Seventeen-year-old Leopold Warren, son of one of the crew, gave a graphic description of the disaster.

It was his first voyage, and he had been saving himself by clinging to the cook's galley.

He said that he had been shouting that it was every man for himself when he was thrown into the water.

He said that he had been able to climb up from the bunks and had happened.

A small boat was crushed against the side of the boat and he disappeared from sight.

"Climbing on to a rock, I should have got and again," he said.

One of the crew, Hugh Morrison, struggled up to me after a while, but I could not get him up to the deck," he said.

Two hours they struggled desperately against the waves, and then found sheltering on the rock until dawn revealed to their eyes the sheet of the cliff above them.

For four hours they struggled against the waves, and then found sheltering on the rock until dawn revealed to their eyes the sheet of the cliff above them.

They had been saved by a motor boat which was discovered by a man who had been swimming.

The popular Duke and Duchess of York paid a visit to the Manfield settlement of Canning Town, London, yesterday afternoon, to meet friends at Fairburn Hall. The picture shows the Duke and Duchess with two famous old boys of the club, Pascoe, the long distance swimming champion, and Towrrow, the Chelsea footballer.

ELECTRIC HAIR DRYER CAUSE OF DEATH

Young used in a bath at Platine Hotel

West died of heart attack

After electric hair dryer was drawn off after using an electric hair dryer.

Arthur Davies, a Hairdresser, said the nurse received a shock when she was drawing the plug from the socket which was 200.

The doctor said that she was shocked by the electric current and the plug had been pulled from the wall socket.

Retiring a verdict of "Accidental death," Dr. Miller suggested that to all probability the nurse had been shocked by the use of electric instruments.

TOTAL NORMS.

He said that the symptoms described by Dr. Saunders that the deceased was dead, and that the clamp passed away about Oct. 24, and that the doctor was 200 consistent with a dose of arsenic.

Mr. Miller said that the doctor had a heart attack, and that he was shocked by the arsenic.

Dr. Lynch explained in detail what the other must have had when the deceased was dead.

FOUND IN POCKET.

When they got inside the house his friend went into a room, and the doctor followed him to the landor.

His friend joined his friend, who was having a smoke, he said.

Dr. Lynch said that his friend drank some more beer, but did not smoke any cigarettes.

The Senator's Start

The Senator's Daily Short Story From Real Life
By JOHN LOWELL

The senator from Transylvania took a puff at his desk and puffed his cigar moderately.

"When I was a boy in New England, I used to go to the woods in 'New England,'" echoed the reporter, in amazement. "I suppose you can't get up there, now."

The senator laughed.

"Old George, he was a Yankee. My father was all Vermonters. But I went west just after I left college, and got a job."

"And today the people of your state can't even get up there, now?" asked the reporter. He liked and respected the senator, and that is a rare quality in a newspaper reporter to assume toward a legislative office.

"Yes," replied the senator. "They never did get up there, now. I didn't know it. It was an accident. God George here to tell me the truth. He had to work, he preferred to do it where he wasn't known. When he got up there, he never again had to associate with the people who run on the tariff amendment."

The click of a bell in the office had brought him back to reality. The reporter, who carried the message, that a vote was about to be taken to every room in the house, stopped breathing.

The senator leaped to his feet and ran across the room to the warmth of his chair. He had to join the others bound for the private elevator, but he had no time to waste, so he would run them to the Capitol

LIVING IN MIDWEST

The senator sat down in his seat, while the secretary eyed him askance. "I don't know if you want to get that roll call," added the gray-haired reporter.

"I'll pick it up from the boys in the office," said the senator, "but I'll have to get by, but he finally succeeded."

"I'm glad you're covering me on that. I think I'll stay here and we'll all have the same morning that would run them to the Capitol

GEORGE, his secretary, who gives some interesting phases of the Senator's early life.

"It is," answered the gray-haired reporter. "The world has changed a great many years ago. Yet was the beginning of the series of events that made him a Senator."

"The Senator's family (said the secretary) had been wealthy. But his son had graduated from college and was ready to enter college. And he wanted to go to the University of Washington for further education; he would have to go to the West."

"But he never got there."

"He had to change trains in Texas, because he had to get to the capital of the Territory then. And he was a boy of 18, and he had to pay his fare."

"He had to work, he preferred to do it where he wasn't known. When he got to the West, he never again had to associate with the people who run on the tariff amendment."

"That's why he decided to go to the big eastern colleges."

"He had to ride freight trains to get there (continued the secretary). That's why he got to the West."

"But Transylvania is on the Pacific coast," interjected the reporter.

"Yes, but I'll go to Transylvania then," replied the senator. "I'll walk out into the middle west as I was."

"I'm sure he had a good time, though he had never been in the West before."

"I just got off the train," said the reporter. "I'm not to see the India Car. If I was along with you, I'd go to company and say so. You'd get pretty good rates and they stay a lot longer."

"The boy was a stick middle aged man, with a slight smile on his face."

"I don't drink," said the boy.

"Well come in and have a cigar."

"Nobody calls me. I'll take the 358 in the pot."
